You are John. Enter the balance into your check register.

Citizen Alert!

Enter the check and subtract the purchase in your check register.

First, John visited an interesting shop called Baubles and bought a (b) _____ necklace for his grandma. It was $3.00, and John wrote a check for his purchase. The sales clerk thanked him for his purchase and offered to wrap the gift in colorful paper.

Then, John visited several other stores, hoping to find his friend (c) _____ a gift for her birthday. He was sure she would love some huge animal stickers, so he gladly wrote a check for $2.50 to Stuck-on-You! when he saw that store's display.

Citizen Alert!

Write that check now! Don't forget to subtract in the register.

Pleased with his two purchases, John decided to go home. He still had many checks in his checkbook, but he knew that what was more important was that he still had money left in his account. What was John's final check register balance?

Since he still has so many checks left, can John write checks for more than the balance amount? _____
