

Second Semester Grading Policy

During the first semester, students were allowed to hand in extremely late assignments for full credit. This policy will change for second semester to better prepare students for seventh grade and beyond.

Students will continue to receive Missing Work lists each Monday. Once an assignment appears on the Missing Work list, the student has until the last day of that week to pass it in for full credit. Once the assignment appears on the Missing Work list for the second time, students will lose ten points per week until the assignment is complete. After six weeks, students may not earn credit and the assignment grade will rest at 50%.

One week late – up to 100%

Two weeks late – up to 90%

Three weeks late – up to 80%

Four weeks late – up to 70%

Five weeks late – up to 60% (F)

Six weeks late – up to 50% (F)

Tests and quizzes will be treated in the same manner. A student has up to one week to complete a test or quiz before they lose points.

Not only does this policy more accurately represent grading policies students will have to comply with in the future, it also rewards students who pass in work on time and stay caught up on assignments.
